From Abundance

Two weeks ago was so great to get together at Grab-A-Mug and just share our thanksgiving from our hearts. It was cool to hear all the varied & different things that people were going through, and ways that God always provides even in the hard times. As we are in this spirit of giving thanks, I'm glad you came last week to pack the bags of food for Mission Greenspoint. As I said before, we have this great opportunity to look at all that God has done for us and all that he has blessed us with, and see great abundance. And from that abundance, we can share with others who don't have quite as much materially. I don't like to say "those less fortunate" because sometimes people that don't have much in possessions or money are fortunate in many other ways. Anyway, there is an old saying, "To whom much is given, much is required." To those of us who have been given much we have the privilege and responsibility to give and share from our blessings. This can come in many forms. We can give material things; we can give of our time and energy; and we can give of our prayers. One of the greatest tools we have to help people is to call on God to help with them with His countless resources and boundless ability. We have a great, loving God who wants to use us to show His love with this whole world. What a cool opportunity. So thanks for being here and thanks for having a servant heart and lifestyle.
