Worship As Evangelism

Worship and evangelism are generally used as two separate areas of a church's life or a believer's life, but as we've talked about in other ways, we're going to work on bringing these two areas together. As Element has moved into the Sunday night time slot, how many of you have noticed a slightly different atmosphere over there? It seems a little more laid back and intimate. I'm excited about the change of the vibe in the Element service because it offers us an opportunity to be more flexible in the service. There is another added bonus to the night time environment that I see. It feels like a place that's a little easier to bring a friend that may not go to our church, or any church. We have a coffee bar and a place to hang out before hand that really eases the fact that you're stepping into a church. If I were someone who didn't go to church, the whole coffee shop area would be much less scary than going to a church service. But in order for us to fully take advantage of the new format it would be good for us to bring people. A lot of times as a church we do these great events in order to give us a place to bring our friends and introduce them to Christ, but then we forget to bring people and it ends up being just something fun for us church members to do. Not that fun with just us is a bad thing, but we want to use our resources on purpose. One of the purposes of the Element service is to have an environment that caters to young people specifically and lets you worship God in a way that's totally comfortable to you. We are there to meet with God together, and learn together, but how cool would it be if we bring someone along with us to see what that looks like. They could see us loving each other, and loving our God, and really see what they're missing. As we worship God we can awaken their need to know God. Bring someone along for the ride. Let them see why you love God and your church.
